This is a generic help page for the MediaWiki software. Many MediaWiki-powered wikis have a help link that points to this page. If you came here from another wiki looking for help with logging in or creating an account, we are not able to help you. Return to your wiki and try to find a forum, talk page or contact address where you can ask for help to the admin of the site.

Logging in is not required for viewing pages, and not even for editing them. However, it provides additional features, and in general projects recommend it.

^ In short

Creating a user account means that you supply a username (your real name or a nickname) and a password. The system will reject a username that is already in use. A user account is created only once. You are then "logged in". Next time you log in you supply your username again and demonstrate with the password that you are the same person.

Edits you make are recorded under your username. If you are not logged in your edits are recorded under your IP address.

^ Why log in?

You don't have to log in to read any public MediaWiki wiki. You don't even have to log in to edit, normally: anyone can edit almost any page, even without logging in.

However, it's still a good idea to log in, for several reasons:

- Other users will be able to recognize you by your username when you make changes to pages. As a "name" an IP address is somewhat

A screenshot of a web browser displaying the MediaWiki "Help:Logging in" page. The browser's address bar shows the URL "m.mediawiki.org > Help:Logging in - MediaWiki". The page title is "Help:Logging in". Below the title, there is a language selection menu with "English" selected. A large red bracket highlights the language selection area. The main content area contains a note about the CC BY-SA license and a disclaimer stating that the page is generic and not specific to the user's wiki. At the bottom, there is a section titled "Logging in" which explains that logging in is required for editing pages.
